

Terry Freedman's Books Bulletin

Dear

Welcome to the latest issue of my books bulletin. It's a minimalist edition I'm afraid, with just one main item in it. I'm still writing up my notes from the London Book Fair, so I hope to get those to you soon. In the meantime, there's a prize draw which you may be interested in.

Also, just to say that I've changed the company I use for sending out newsletters, from Aweber to Mailerlite. I'm still getting to grips with it, so please forgive me if there are any slip-ups. I've just imported into Mailerlite your name and email address plus the fact that you originally signed up for the list. You should have received a welcome email which bears a remarkable resemblance to the one you received on signing up originally.

By the way, if you have received two emails about the prize draw, it's probably because you're signed up to both of my newsletters. I try to keep the content different, but on this occasion the publisher has agreed to open the prize draw to subscribers of both newsletters.

Anyway, do enter the draw, you have nothing to lose!

Best wishes

Terry

Prize Draw and Beta readers

The prize on offer this week is Alex Quigley's Closing the Vocabulary Gap. I've written a longish review of it here:

Review of Closing the Vocabulary Gap.

To enter, please complete this entry form:

Prize draw

The closing date is midnight GMT on 28th May 2018, as shown in the countdown timer below.

In the meantime, if you're interested in how we run competitions, and how we protect your data while doing so, you can download a pdf describing the process by clicking on this link:

Prize draw procedure

End bits

Do tell others about the newsletter!

Disclaimer

All the information and links in this newsletter have been checked, and offered in good faith. For the full text of the disclaimer, please see Terms & conditions.

Acknowledgements

Thanks to all the people and organisations who contributed to this newsletter.

Copyright

This newsletter is © 2018 Terry Freedman. Contributors retain the copyright in their own articles. Unless otherwise stated, the illustrations used have either been downloaded from www.pixabay.com under a CC0 licence, were taken or drawn by Terry Freedman, or were supplied by contributors for their own articles.

Terry Freedman Ltd

SHARE

TWEET

FORWARD